What is Attraction?

This question plagued my mind for many years as a lonely virgin.

The Oxford Dictionary defines attraction as “the action or power of evoking interest, pleasure, or liking for someone or something.”

But Female-to-Male attraction is specifically different. After 15 years in-field, I humbly define “attraction” as “the ability to create emotional moments with women, and for her to perceive relevant social value in a man”

An emotional “moment” is a positive burst of endorphins and serotonin... that feeling that compels a forward action in the courtship process. Often, she’s can’t put into words. Yet the right sequence of words can invoke it.

Perceived social value has to be relevant. In other words, if the man has high value but can't relate to her, the value can't be translated into a dating context. For example, President Obama has high perceived value, but low dating openness. Perception of social value can be logical, but also felt by the way a man says something.

The following 101 lines are based on 15+ years in field myself and over 10+ years training as a coach.

When in doubt, experiment with the way you say the lines. Your voice inflection, your facial expressions, and your body language.

The lines you're about to see are based on 15 years in-field. 10 years coaching clients. 65,000 approaches, and 62,000 messages and texts. Enjoy!
